Ride By Faith Erin HicksRealisticnorrie loves horses and connects to a new friend named Victoria, who also likes horses and a science fiction show. They find common ground, forgiveness and mutual support. It is a history of friendship, horses, being yourself and growing in confidence. Animal rescue friends of Meika Hashimoto, Gina Loveless and Genevieve Koterealistic IninterConnected Stories of children's lives show how they find consolation and purpose through the shelter of animal rescue friends. The character of each child is well developed and we feel connected to their history and life. Children who love animals fall in love with this beautiful and attractive graphic novel. Awkward of Svetlana Chmakova growing up from 10 years found this book as relatiable-as she struggles with confidence and speech, the same happens to the main character, Peppi. This well-made graphic novel addresses the issues of friendships and trust, among other things. (I'm so glad I'm no longer in high school) We highly recommend this graphic novel. Brave by Svetlana Chmakova Bullyingjensen is the miserable target of the school's aggressors. His friends Jenny and Akilah decide to write newspaper articles to help him, but his plans made without Jensen's consent harm his friendship. The ups and downs and challenges of Jensen's life (which he relates to a video game) show how he finds his trust, interrupts the aggressors and grows in who he is. The main characters are very well developed and both stories that make them really interesting. Joana D'arc. Although the authors do not claim that this is anything but fiction, I would say it is more close to the non. It is incredible to see Joan never falter in his convictions and be strong in the face of dan and eventually death. This is an excellent representation of her life.
